Magic is real

This is not a museum.

I'M NOT HERE TO GAWK AT ANCIENT RELICS.

History and culture don't belong behind a velvet rope.

They're alive.

They're real.

And they're happening right now.

I travel for the little details for the Small stuff the tiny, barely-remembered:
Sensations that add up to memories.

I'M GOING TO TRY EVERYTHING.

From the palms to quiet of desert.

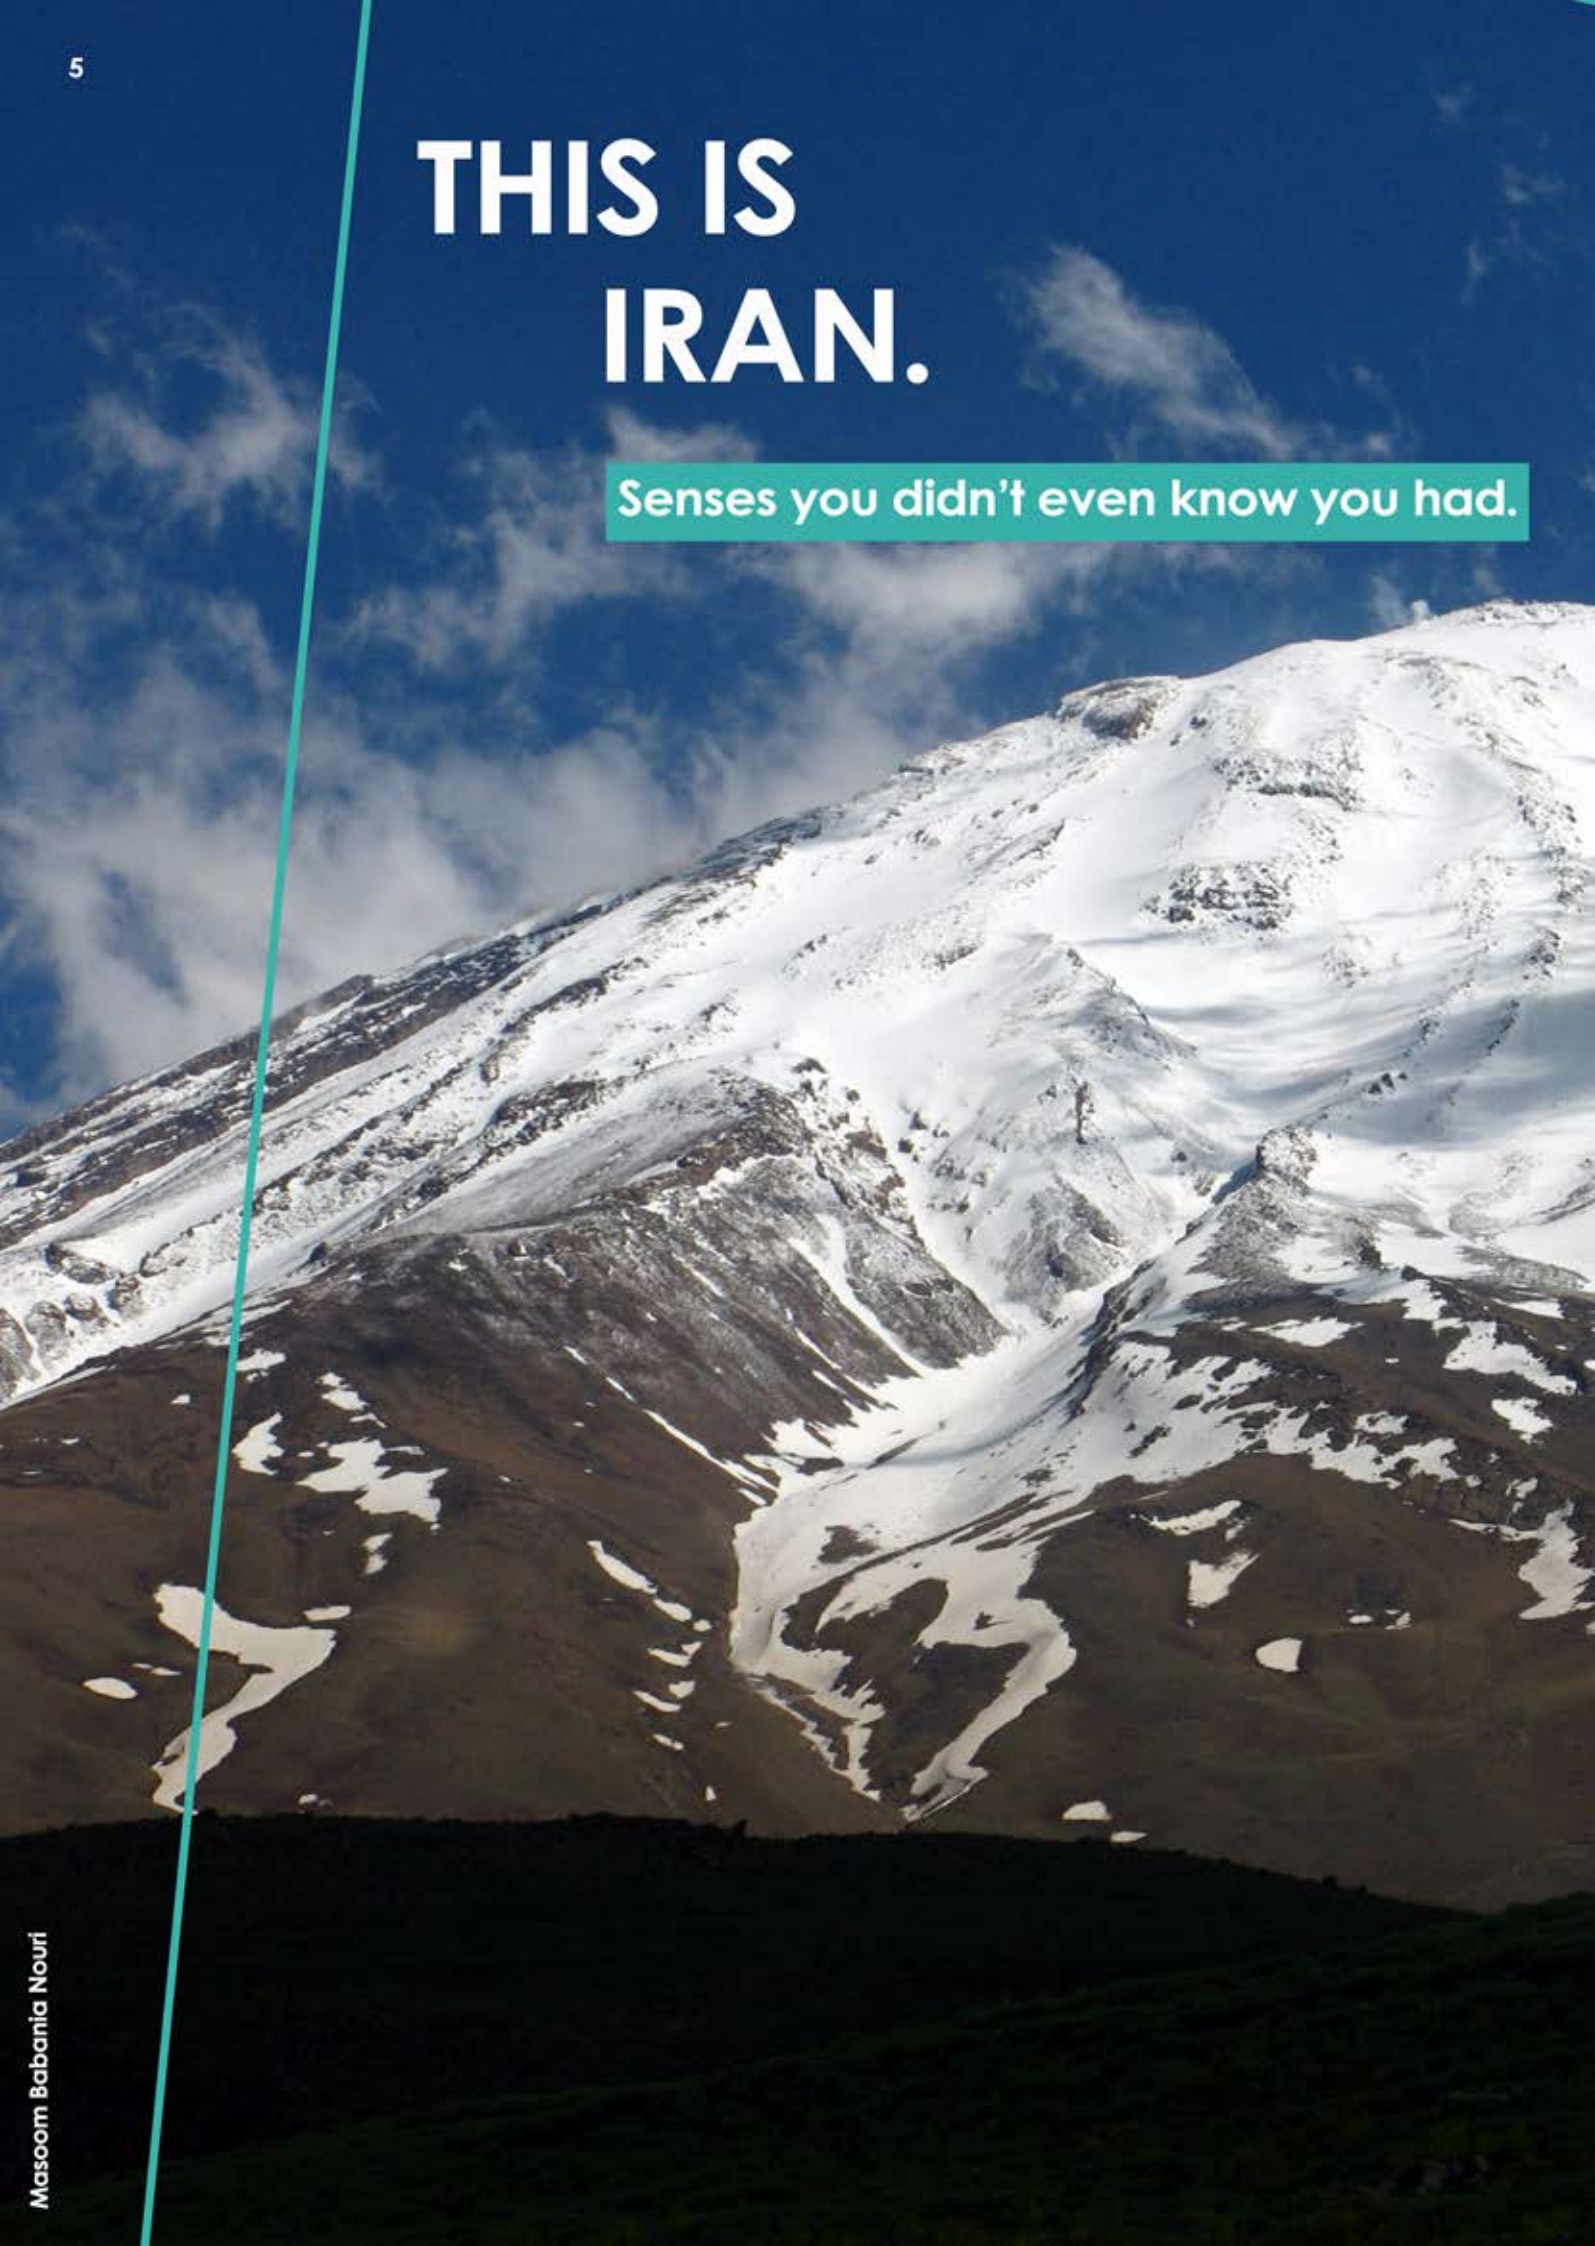

Here, you can remember

Your name.

THIS IS IRAN.

Senses you didn't even know you had.

THIS IS MY COUNTRY.

You really should come see it at least once.

YOU'LL NEVER FORGET IT.

Dress Code

Remember that this is a religious nation. Women must wear a headscarf all the times, apart from in their hotel bedrooms. Hijab for women is a head covering scarf, a long blouse or shirt with long sleeves, and long jeans or pants. Men dressing is the same as male dressing all around the world, but it is better not to wear short trousers.

220V

Plug type is just 220 V. Bring an adapter with you if using other plugs.

Mount Damavand, in Alborz Mountains stands at 5671m. One of mountaineering's most daunting challenges, it may yield only a handful of routes each year especially in winter.

From Kerman's lowlands to the high mountains of Alborz, the immense size of Iran makes the climate impossible to generalize as each region has its own characteristic weather conditions.

WELCOME TO CENTRAL IRAN

Empires have bloomed and withered here. Top sights are the Achaemenid capital of Persepolis, the Sassanian center at Bishapur, Safavid glories in Isfahan and the preserved desert city of Yazd.

Desert Hospitality

Experience Desert Hospitality: stay in Garmeh which is a classic oasis, Zein o din a restored caravanserai and Fahraj a somnolent town, or stay with a family in farahzad.

Desert

'A great silence overcomes me, and I wonder why I ever thought to use language.' The great Persian poet Rumi may never have been to the desert towns northeast of Isfahan, but this oft-repeated line could have been written specifically for them. The Dasht-e Kavir, one of two deserts dominating the landscape of eastern Iran, is a mix of sand and salt that is as blinding in its whiteness as the desert is deafening in its total, unimaginable silence. Within these desolate environs exist oases, and among these oases are some sweet spring villages. Don't travel here in summer, as temperature regularly reaches 50°C and few places have air-conditioning.

TOP Experiences

- 1 Kashan
- 2 Esfahan
- 3 Yazd
- 4 Shiraz
- 5 Persepolis
- 6 Garmeh
- 7 Mount Karkas
- 8 Mount Shirr
- 9 Lot Desert
- 10 Bishapur

LAND OF THE EMPERORS

This isolated Atashkadeh about 72 km northwest of Yazd and deep in the desert, is Iran's most important Zoroastrian pilgrimage site.

Architecture

Architectural germs include: Isfahan wondrous Naqsh e Jahan (Imam) Square, Jzameh Mosque and bridges; Kashan boasts extravagant Qajar mansions; and courtyard homes which has turned into hotels in Yazd.

Climate

ESFAHAN 1591m (5218ft)

If the idea of a direct bus, train or air trip between Isfahan and Shiraz like a missed opportunity, you may wish to consider an alternative jaunt through the Zagros mountains. Here, the sharp folds of barren ridge and flowing valley stretch for 1500km from Turkish border to the Persian Gulf coast. The population is Persian, Luri and Kurdish mixed with a vast number of nomads, primarily Bakhtiari and Qashqa'i.

The sheikh was a Sufi leader, who trained his followers in Islamic mystic practices. Ardabil rugs are renowned and the ancient Ardabil Carpets are considered some of the best of the classical Persian carpet creations. Through different periods of history Ardabil has developed various craft courses in order to present and export to various communities. When travelling there, you really must try some of the traditional dishes, as there is a great variety of food, traditional desserts and sweets, and the quality of their honey is renowned. Sareyn, which is located in Ardebil and considered the most important and attractive county of Ardabil, is famous for its Abgarm ("warm spas"). The Sareyn springs are near an inactive volcano in mount Sabalan and its water contains sulphur particles. Many people believe that its mineral water is good for bone and joint pains. The word sareyn means "spring's outlet". The climate and hot springs are the first attractions to tourists who travel to this region from different parts of Iran and the world. Hot springs have always been in Sareyn but the 1990s earthquake caused some of them to get colder or hotter. The water is heated largely by the Sabalan Mountain which is Iran's third highest mountain after Damavand and Alam Kuh. There are 9 hot springs in Sareyn, with "Gavmesh Gali" being the hottest, with water reaching 67 degrees, and turning out around 80 liters per second from the source. There are also several cold water springs nearby, with the most popular being situated in a small village nearby called 'Vila Dareh' - the water here is fizzy and is very good for the kidneys. Sareyn is also famous for its "Ashe Dooq" (yogurt soups), during the busy summer periods: it is not uncommon for many of the local shops to be seen selling and preparing this soup.

WELCOME TO NORTHEASTERN IRAN

Sandwiched between the vast desert emptiness of the Dasht-e Kavir and the steppes of Central Asia, northeastern Iran has a spine of mountains that become more lushly forested as you head west. East of Minudasht the wilderness has been declared the Golestan (Paradise) National Park. Above the overdeveloped Caspian coast rise more forests and the grand Alborz Mountains. A trio of beautiful but busy roads take you across that dramatic range but there are lesser-known alternatives that get you into more remote, less spoilt zones around Alasht and Baladeh.
